Karpov Chess Academy (October 12-14)

Canadian U8 Champion Janak Awatramani takes on former World Champion Anatoly Karpov in a simultaneous display. (More photos at <http://picasaweb.google.com/gyanawatramani/Karpov?authkey=rF85B1oE3s8>)

This chess camp for junior players took place at the Grand Hotel in Toronto. With financial aid from both the CFC and CMA, international GMs Anatoly Karpov, Emil Sutovsky, and Ni Hua joined Canadians Mark Bluvshstein, Pascal Charbonneau, and Yan Teplitsky in this inaugural camp aimed at those Canadians taking part in the WYCC next month. Janak Awatramani of Vancouver was the only B.C. student taking part. It is hoped the academy will have a continuing presence in Canada; see www.karpovchess.ca/index.html.

Sprott-Shaw October Junior Open (October 13)

Thirty-four players competed in the first Lower Mainland junior open of the season, held at the Sprott-Shaw Community College in New Westminster. The next event is November 3: <http://bjdy.com/juniorchess/JuniorOpen2007.pdf>.

North American Youth Chess Championships (October 5-7)

Some comments on the tournament from Glen Lee, BCCF Webmaster and father of U8 participant Jonah Lee:

"Overall, I was very impressed with how the tournament was run. The tournament had good media coverage with some of our kids being interviewed and appearing on the local television. We felt very welcome right from the start and were pleasantly surprised by the "special treatment" we all received. The restaurant tried to take care of all the participants and made food custom to order for kids that had specific allergies. Special free tours were arranged to take visitors to tourist areas around the city which was very refreshing.

As for the tournament, rounds started on time and ran very smoothly. Ample televisions were present to detail rounds, standings, and to show live games. Things they could have done better include: updating the website with current information and allowing the kids to play out for medals for tiebreakers. Unfortunately, the computer tiebreaker rules did not work for our situation and it would have been nice to let the kids play more games to determine the true winner.

The tournament ended with a nice closing ceremony and a dinner at a local traditional taco restaurant."

1972 CANADIAN CHAMPIONSHIP

Recently the Canadian Championship was held in Kitchener, Ontario, a thirty-player nine-round Swiss which ended in victory for Nikolay Noritsyn after many playoff games. The tournament was played over six days. Thirty-five years ago was a different era: the 1972 Canadian Championship was an eighteen-player(!) round robin (along with the 1969 championship the largest such Canadian event since the Second World War) held over seventeen days (i.e., no rest days), with a long time control and adjournments (sometimes more than one in a game). Neither Yanofsky or Suttles could play, which left IM Zvonko Vranesic as the pre-tournament favourite (he had tied for first in the previous championship, only losing to Suttles in the playoff match), but with a closely-matched field anything was possible.

In the end it was the twenty-one year old B.C. Champion Peter Biyasas who made the most of his chances and husbanded his resources the best in winning the tournament with 12.0/17, a mere half point ahead of second-placed George Kuprejanov and Lawrence Day. Kuprejanov had led for the first half of the event but was joined by Day and Biyasas in round nine. Thereafter Biyasas never gave up at least a share of first; his pragmatic approach being exemplified by the last three rounds, where he agreed to three relatively short draws while Kuprejanov and Day were unable to maintain the pace. One example of the possible pitfalls was the fate of Geza Fuster, who wore himself out in trying to win too many adjourned games.

The (unattributed) report in Canada Chess Chat had these comments on the play of the B.C. representatives:

"In this bitter seventeen-day-long fight Peter Biyiasas of Vancouver came out on top. His games were by no means faultless; as he himself admitted, he was lost in several games. However, chess is more complex than just playing well and winning a better position. It is equally important to play resourcefully in an inferior position, finding difficult defensive moves and finally turning a loss into a victory. Those who can do this must be very strong. Peter Biyiasas was the best at this and deservedly won the tournament. He temporized his draws and wins properly and in the last rounds he held better positions and agreed upon draws in better positions, first to get his international title and then to win the championship... Robert Zuk played carelessly in some better positions, forgetting the old saying that "the most difficult thing is to win a better position," provided that the opponent is strong... Jonathan Berry is also one who has something in mind when making moves. His games are enterprising, but he should avoid getting into time trouble so often. Elod Macskasy was in the leading group for a while, but losing good games against Kuprejanov and Coudari and a winning adjourned game against Biyiasas threw him back." NICK'S BEST

While assisting at the Canadian Open in Ottawa last July I had a short (pun intended) conversation with the English GM Nigel Short. Apart from being a strong player and ambassador for chess he is also a collector, and our discussion centred on published works dealing with Canadian chess. Our conversation was of necessity short because this is a fairly limited subject: apart from historical works on Pollock and the young Frank Marshall, two volumes by Yanofsky, various tournament books (including Montreal 1979) and the recent The History of Correspondence Chess in Canada, there is a rather embarrassing dearth of monographs on the subject. Given this state of affairs, I was very happy to be able to tell Short that a just-published games collection of a Canadian player, Nick's Best, was receiving its Ottawa launch at the Canadian Open in a lecture and signing session by the book's author, IM Lawrence Day.

It is now just over three years since the untimely death of IM Bryon Nickoloff, one of the most colourful (and controversial) figures in Canadian chess in recent times. A study in contrasts, Nickoloff combined an IQ of 180 with little formal schooling, an obsession with chess with alcohol abuse. A frequent member of Olympiad teams and contender for Canadian Championships both Open and Closed, Nickoloff developed a deserved reputation as an opening theorist and endgame connoisseur, but his games were often decided in chaotic time-scrambles, the result of too much time spent searching for perfection in the middlegame. Some of his opening preparation was world class, the most famous example being his advocacy of the Archangelsk Variation of the Ruy Lopez (1.e4 e5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.Bb5 a6 4.Ba4 Nf6 5.O-O b5 6.Bb3 Bb7), with which he came within a whisker of beating Alexey Shirov (world number three at the time) at North Bay in 1994.

Lawrence Day is the ideal author for this games collection: he knew Nickoloff as a friend, colleague, and rival throughout the latter's playing career, and brings writing skill, analytical ability, and inside anecdotal knowledge to bear in equal measure. The main body of the book is seventy-three annotated games, but there are a fair number of additional complete games in the notes. Day takes particular care in setting the context for each game, both in terms of the tournament situation and the state of opening theory at the time. Interspersed with the games are biographical details and anecdotes, along with tributes and comments from many Canadian masters, including Brian Hartman, Deen Hergott, Bob Kiviahio, Jonathan Berry, Kevin Spraggett, Michael Dougherty, Ian Findlay, Leon Piasetski, Denis Allan, Ron Livshits. The book is rounded out by twenty-one tactical positions ("Combo Bombo" in Nickoloff's self-invented language), photographs, crosstables, and three comprehensive indices. A handsomely-produced volume of over three hundred pages, Nick's Best is published by the Chess 'n Math Association of Montreal and is readily available from the CMA or CFC. A model games collection: anyone interested in Canadian chess need not hesitate.

2008 BC CORRESPONDENCE CHESS CHAMPIONSHIP

Entries are now being taken for the 2008 Championship, which will be the third annual running of this event in recent times. However, the Canadian Correspondence Chess Association (CCCA) has apparently added a new stricture for this year, that the tournament must include at least ten participants or it will be cancelled. Therefore, if you are at all interested in entering this championship, please let Vas Sladek know at the below address.

Contact: Vas Sladek, 604-562-3736, vas@chessfirst.com

Date: January 1, 2008 start

Rounds: all games are played on the ICCF webserver (no e-mails, no postcards!)

Type: Round Robin, CCCA rated

EF: $15

Prizes: clear 1st software prize from chessfirst.com

Registration By December 1, 2007, Vas Sladek, 604-562-3736, vas@chessfirst.com

Misc BC residents ONLY and CCCA membership required $30/year; CCCA requires 10 participants to run the event so please consider joining.
