Iasi International Chess Festival (May 29 – June 6)

Leon Piasetski is currently playing in the 2nd Iasi Open, Iasi being the largest city in eastern Romania. After eight of nine rounds Leon has 5.5 points, leaving him in a tie for seventh, a full point behind leaders Deep Sengupta (India), Igor Kovalenko (Latvia), and Baris Esen (Turkey). The one hundred and twenty-eight player field includes twenty grandmasters. Results; tournament website

Washington Open (May 23-25)

In the Pacific Northwest we have a chess ‘double-header’: the Paul Keres Memorial is held on the Canadian Victoria Day weekend, while the Washington Open occurs one week later on the American Memorial Day weekend. As usual this year’s Washington Open attracted a number of B.C. players, including James Chan, John, Joshua, and Neil Doknjas, Patrick Huang, Joe Roback, Tanraj Sohal, and Butch Villavieja (apologies if I missed anyone). In the Open Tanraj Sohal tied for second with IM Raymond Kaufman (who also played in the Keres the previous weekend) while Joshua Doknjas tied for fourth; Neil Doknjas tied for fourth in the Premier Section (U2000), and Patrick Huang tied for second in the Reserve (U1700). The overall winner was FM Roland Feng, demonstrating strong parallels with the winner of the Keres, FM Jason Cao – both are the current champion of their respective province/state, and both are the youngest ever holders of those titles. The juniors are indeed taking over ...

Chicago Open (May 21-25)

While some of our players travelled south on the Memorial Day Weekend, others headed east – to the Windy City. Now in its twenty-fourth year, the Chicago Open boasted a $100,000 guaranteed prize fund and resultant strong competition, and from this province three players took up the challenge: Ethan and Kevin Low and Severo (Juni) Caluza. For the Lows the tournament was a training opportunity as each played up a section, while Caluza won his first three games but then castled long to finish with 50% after a last-round bye. The overall winner was fourteen year old Jeffery Xiong of Texas, whose last-round win over top-seeded Cuban GM Lazaro Bruzon Batista netted him $10,300 and his third and final GM norm. Butch Villavieja

As we reported in the last issue, Butch Villavieja was the winner of the May Active with a perfect 6.0/6 score. However, missing was the following information, from T.D. Joe Roback:

It was a triumphant farewell to Butch's adventures in Vancouver. In 2009, Butch moved to Canada with his wife and three kids from the Zamboanga Simugay province of the Philippines (population 584,000 in 2010). Butch quickly established himself as a dominant force in local active and CFC tournaments, notably the sole winner of the 2012 B.C. Championship. Butch was a frequent competitor, arbiter, and coach of dozens of kids throughout B.C. He is pictured with his favourite World Champion, Bobby Fischer, who likely influenced his dynamic style with a strong theoretical grounding. He is moving to Edmonton shortly to greet his family.

BRUCE HARPER ANNOTATES

Harper, Bruce - Opponent [A00] ICC 3 0 Internet Chess Club

1.g3 [0:03:00] 1...d5 [0:03:00] 2.Bg2 [0:03:00] 2...c6 [0:02:59] 3.d3 [0:02:59] 3...g6 [0:02:59] 4.Nc3 [0:02:58] 4...Bg7 [0:02:58] 5.Bd2 [0:02:58] 5...Nf6 [0:02:57] 6.Qc1 [0:02:57] 6...0-0 [0:02:56]

A standard position, at least for me. I called this the "Suttles System" in the books, explaining that all the good openings were taken... 7.Bh6 [0:02:56] 7...Bxh6 [0:02:50] 8.Qxh6 [0:02:54] 8...Qb6 [0:02:49]

Black has played for this by exchanging on h6. To be clear, 8...Qb6 is not a deep positional move to put pressure on the dark squares in White's position. Black is actually playing for a cheap trick - he threatens 9...Qx2+ 10.Kxf2 Ng4+ and 11...Nxh6, winning a pawn. But White's opening, which is probably one big positional trick, takes this into account.

9.Nd1! [0:02:51] The exclamation mark isn't because 9.Nd1 is good (it's actually forced), but because it's cool and probably annoying as well, since 8...Qb6 seemed so clever. 9...Ng4!? [0:02:38] This came as a bit of a surprise - was Black trying to evict White's queen from h6, or was he hoping just to take it? I decided the latter, so at this point I categorized Black as a "one threat wonder," which came into play a few moves later. 10.Qd2 [0:02:45] 10...e5 [0:02:35]

At this point White can play normally, perhaps continuing with 11.c3 or 11.h3, but instead I decided to set a cheap trap of my own. The logic was this: One Threat Wonder fancied himself a great tactician and couldn't help but think that he would always see more than his opponent. I therefore wanted to give him a chance to play an apparent tactical refutation, although actually the "refutation" was a blunder if you looked one move farther (i.e., two moves...). 11.f3!? [0:02:41]

11...Nxh2? [0:02:17]

This move, which Black took 18 seconds (!) to make, is horrible. Even if it worked, it would fail, because Black's h2-knight threatens nothing and can't escape. What made this game fun was that I thought Black would play this, because he would be convinced that White had just overlooked that 12.Rxh2? loses to 12...Qxg1+. 12.Qh6 [0:02:39]

This also made the game fun, because Black's h2–knight is pinned to the mate on h7, and White is threatening to capture Black's h2–knight – with his h6–queen! 12...Qb4+ [0:02:05] This doesn't help. 13.c3 [0:02:34] 13...Qe7 [0:02:04] 14.Rxh2 [0:02:28] 14...f5 [0:02:03] Black decides not to resign, so he deserves another diagram or two. 15.Nh3 [0:02:22] 15...e4 [0:01:59] 16.dxe4 [0:02:11] 16...fxe4 [0:01:58] 17.fxe4 [0:02:05] 17...dxe4 [0:01:52] 18.Ng5 [0:02:00]

18...Bg4 [0:01:44] 19.Nxh7 [0:01:56] 19...Rf7 [0:01:43]

Now 20.Qxg6+ wins everything, but the move White played is good enough. 20.Ng5 [0:01:52] Black resigns. 1–0

PAUL KERES (7 January 1916 - 5 June 1975)

Today, June 5, is the fortieth anniversary to the day of the passing of Paul Keres, an event commemorated in Vancouver ever since by the annual Keres Memorial tournament (and next January will mark the hundredth anniversary of his birth). Having won the Vancouver 1975 event with an 8.5/10 score, Keres was returning home to Estonia when he suffered a fatal heart attack in Helsinki. His funeral five days later witnessed an outpouring of grief seldom accorded a chessplayer - for Estonians, Keres was a national hero:

The eulogy was given by Boris Spassky: "The world of chess has suffered an enormous loss, Paul Keres is dead. All the finest qualities that chess fosters in man were admirably embodied in this one person. A penetrating intellect and a giant talent for the game, which brought him world-wide fame, were combined in Keres with rare personal qualities. For many years Paul Keres was the de facto leader of the world of chess, guarding the best traditions of the game; he was also a warm and generous person and a sportsman of the first order. His brilliant games and books on chess represent a magnificent contribution to this intellectual endeavour. I have been fortunate to have been Paul Keres' friend. I cherished this rare, wonderful person, and will always cherish his memory. My heart is full of sorrow on this sad occasion." [CFC Bulletin, July/August 1975]

Keres' stature as a player is well known and we will not attempt to duplicate the fine material on Keres which can be found elsewhere on the internet. Instead, we here present previous Bulletin items on his relationship with B.C., including a previously unpublished remembrance by Dan Scoones

1967: Keres and Spassky in B.C.

Everyone is aware that Vancouver 1975 was Paul Keres' last tournament appearance, hence the holding of the Paul Keres Memorial in his memory. However, Keres also visited B.C. in 1967; to celebrate the Canadian centenary that year a grandmaster event was organized in Winnipeg, which included the participation of the Soviet players Boris Spassky and Paul Keres. While in Canada Spassky and Keres gave simultaneous displays in various locations, including the province; here is a report that appeared in the November 1967 issue of Canadian Chess Chat:

On Saturday, October 14th, both grandmasters gave an exhibition in Nanaimo. Mr. Spassky played ten opponents with clocks and won all games. Mr. Keres played 23 opponents in the usual simultaneous way. He won 22 games and drew one (Bryant).

On Sunday, October 15th, both grandmasters gave an exhibition at the Vancouver City Chess Club. Mr. Spassky played 23 opponents; he won 2 games and drew one (Le Compte from Washington). Mr. Keres played 23 opponents; he won 17 games, drew two (Schneider, Wuentschek) and lost four (Berry, Harper, Overas, Pitt - the last two from Washington).

On Tuesday, October 17th, Mr. Spassky gave an exhibition in North Vancouver. He played 17 opponents; he won 45 games and drew two (Mrs. L'Hirondelle, Mr. Savchenko). On the same evening Mr. Keres gave an exhibition in New Westminster; he played 46 opponents. He won 45 games and drew one (R. Zuk).

Keres in action, but in 1975 rather than 1967; the front cover of the CFC Bulletin, May/June 1975

As noted in the second paragraph above, Keres lost games at the Vancouver Chess Club to two teenagers who would later become prominent members of the B.C. chess community:

Jonathan Berry, fourteen, and Bruce Harper, thirteen, both pupils at Sentinel Secondary School, bested the Soviet grandmaster during an exhibition at the Mount Pleasant Community Centre ... Keres said today he did not remember his matches with the schoolboys and does not keep scores of his exhibition games. "But I guess they kept the scores and will remember for a long time," Keres commented. "If that is the case, then I am glad they enjoyed the games." [Vancouver Sun, October 16, 1967]

Dan Scoones submitted the following memories:

The story on Keres and Spassky was a trip down memory lane for me. I was fourteen years old at the time, and I was one of the ten punching bags who took on Spassky in Nanaimo. I know the venue was a local hotel, but I can't remember which one. Ed Seedhouse and Alan Lane also played against Spassky, while George Dinescu played against Keres. We drove up together in the same car. I don't recall there being any other Victoria players.

Before the event got underway, local alderman (and future mayor) Frank Ney welcomed the visitors and participants. Apart from an amusing gaffe (addressing Spassky as Mr. "Konaski") he made a very nice speech. At that time the annual bathtub race was in its infancy, and I clearly recall the alderman decking out the two GMs with little paper hats, paper flags and toy bathtubs marking the event. The look of sheer confusion on Spassky's face was priceless. Keres, however, merely smiled and nodded sagely.

In reply, Keres spoke on behalf of the two of them, having much the better command of English at that time. He said they were enjoying their visit to Canada. The just-concluded Winnipeg GM tournament (won by Darga and Larsen) had been hard work, he said, and they were looking forward to our event as a chance to relax. In my youth and naiveté I found that statement surprising – how could playing ten opponents be easier than playing one opponent? Later, of course, I came to understand what he meant.

As it turned out, Spassky was just too tough for us, especially having White in every game. I got onto the bad side of a Queen's Gambit Declined and just couldn't defend against Spassky's kingside attack (gee -- I wonder why?) I did last for a while, unlike poor Ed Seedhouse, who blundered a piece right in the opening. In a difficult position I set a clever trap for Spassky, but he saw through it in two or three seconds and gave me a wry smile before uncorking the refutation.

After the game, he signed my scoresheet and said "You played well." I said, "Yes, but not as well as Russian kids my age," which brought a surprised and good-d laugh.

After the ten clock games were finished we got to chat with Boris for a little while. He couldn't advise us about what we should have played in our games because, as he said, he didn't understand English notation (meaning descriptive.) Responding to a question about Fischer, he acknowledged that the American was a "very strong player." Luckily enough, George Dinescu was booked up on Spassky lore, and said, "Yes, but you beat him." This got another smile.

After the event was over we all went down to the hotel restaurant for a banquet. When our group eventually prepared to leave, I shook hands with both GMs and thanked them for coming. I looked at Spassky and said, "I think you will get a second chance at Petrosian, and this time you will beat him." That too got a big laugh from both GMs, but years later I wondered if he ever recalled the prediction made by the young Canadian in Nanaimo...

Boris Spassky on Paul Keres

I loved Paul Petrovitch with a kind of special, filial feeling. Honesty, correctness, discipline, diligence, astonishing modesty – these were the characteristics that caught the eye of the people who came into contact with Keres during his lifetime. But there was also something mysterious about him. I had an acute feeling that Keres was carrying some kind of a heavy burden all through his life. Now I understand that this burden was the infinite love for the land of his ancestors, an attempt to endure all the ordeals, to have full responsibility for his every step. I have never met a person with an equal sense of responsibility. This man with internally free and independent character was at the same time a very well disciplined person. Back then I did not realise that it is discipline that largely determines internal freedom. For me, Paul Keres was the last Mohican, the carrier of the best traditions of classical chess and – if I could put it this way – the Pope of chess. Why did he not become the champion? I know it from personal experience that in order to reach the top, a person is thinking solely of the goal, he has to forget everything else in this world, toss aside everything unnecessary – or else you are doomed. How could Keres forget everything else?

Keres' games from his last tournament, Vancouver 1975, are presented below, but we also include his other two tournament games against the B.C. players who went on to become OTB grandmasters, Duncan Suttles and Peter Biyiasas:
