Maurice Ashley/Amy Lee Visit (August 10)

In Bulletin #288 we reported on the Millionaire Chess Open in Las Vegas and mentioned the two main personalities behind the event, grandmaster Maurice Ashley and Vancouver-based entrepreneur Amy Lee. Both visited Vancouver recently and a friendly evening of socializing and blitz chess was organized by Ashley/Sophia Tapp and Maxim Doroshenko at the Vancouver Chess School. A good time was had by all. Report

Bowser Builders Supply Tournament (August 9)

Now in its seventh year, this annual event in the community of Bowser on Vancouver Island is organized by the Bishops of Bowser chess club and sponsored by Bowser Builders Supply, who this year provided for the purchase of two premium wood chess sets from Chess Bazaar in India. Topping the ten-player field was current B.C. Champion Jason Cao, who incidentally also played in the first Bowser tournament seven years ago. Roger Patterson and Nick Peters tied for second, while the women's prize went to Lucette Fuerst. Tournament website

Westbank Peterson Active (August 9)

A recent residential development in Vancouver's West End is The Lauren at 1051 Broughton Street. The complex includes three outdoor chess tables, and to promote their use an active chess tournament was organized by chess2inspire, sponsored by two of The Lauren's companies, Westbank and Peterson. Attracted by the $1,600 in guaranteed prizes (both cash and gift cards from local merchants), forty-two players entered the competition. The time control was game in 15 minutes with a 5-second increment, with four boards inside, six on a sheltered terrace next to the building, and the rest at street level next to the chess tables.

The overall winners were Jack Cheng, Madiyar Amerkeshev, and Brian McLaren, the top juniors were John Doknjas, Joshua Doknjas, and Michael Su, and the top players in the lower half were Marionito Jose and Brian Sullivan. The crosstable, a complete list of winners, more photos and links to media can be found here.

FIDE Kitchener Masters (July 31 – August 4)

The first in an intended series of Canadian norm events, the Kitchener Masters employed a modified Scheveningen format (two teams of five players but only nine rounds) to maximize the number of norm possibilities. The teams were as follows:

Team 1

GM Evgeny Bareev (RUS)
GM Bator Sambuev (CAN)
GM John Fedorowicz (USA)
FM Jason Cao (CAN)
FM Michael Song (CAN)

Team 2

IM Razvan Preotu (CAN)
IM Tomas Krnan (CAN)
IM Raja Panjwani (CAN)
IM Kesav Viswanadha (USA)
Navid Chaichi (IRI)

Each team member played everyone else on the other team in a series of mini-matches, once with white, once with black, with the exception of the ninth round where the players met only once. This meant that all the norm requirements, including number of players from different federations and number of titled players, could be met while only needing three grandmasters; a ten-round event would have necessitated a fourth grandmaster and one less norm possibility on team 1. Opponents and colours for the final 'single' round were determined by lot, with the proviso that all the Canadians had to play each other (to limit the number of opponents they would meet from the same federation). The norm requirements were as follows: for the FMs, 6.0/9 would give them an IM norm; for the IMs, 6.5 points was necessary for a GM norm; but for lowest-rated and untitled Navid Chaichi, the GM norm was 7.0 points (he only played highest-rated Bareev once) and an IM norm 5.0.

Given the strength of the opposition achieving a norm was always going to be a tall order, highlighted for the IMs when team 1 won round one with a 5-0 score. Razvan Preotu kept his chances alive by defeating Fedorowicz twice on the third day, which meant after the sixth round three players could still achieve a norm – Preotu, Jason Cao, and Michael Song – but only by winning their remaining games. As Preotu met Song in rounds seven and eight one of them would be eliminated from contention; they traded wins, extinguishing each other's hopes. This left Cao, who won in round seven but whose norm chances ended in round eight when he hung his queen.

The overall winner was Evgeny Bareev, former number four in the world, who is currently in the process of changing his federation to Canada. He claimed to be a little rusty, but still scored 8.0/9, 2.5(!) points ahead of second-placed finishers Bator Sambuev and Razvan Preotu. The only people to achieve norms were the two arbiters, your editor and Michael von Keitz (Bareev scored the equivalent of an eleven-round IM norm). Standings along with link to games

Canadian Senior (July 31 – August 3)

Held in Kitchener, Ontario as part of the Kitchener Chess Festival, the Canadian Senior is now held in two sections, over 50 and over 65. The over 65 category attracted fifteen players, including our own Paul Leblanc; he finished in a tie for fifth place with 4.0/7. Tied for first were husband and wife Sasha and Nava Starr with 5.0 points – despite having just a half-point each after the first two rounds due to byes, they won the rest of their games and drew with each other in the last round. Michael Barron won the thirteen-player over 50 division with 6.5/7. Big news – a bid had been submitted to hold the Canadian Senior in B.C. next year in June. We will announce further details as they become available. Festival website

Calgary International (July 29 – August 3)

Now in its eighth year, the 2015 Calgary International attracted a field of twenty-one players, including four grandmasters. Unsurprisingly they took the top four places, with Alex Lenderman coming first with 7.5/9, a full point ahead of Michael Roiz, Alexander Shabalov, and Victor Mikhalevski. There were two players from B.C.; Leon Piasetski finished with 5.0 points, while junior Kai Richardson (rated 1775) didn't play anyone below 2000 until the last round but scored 4.5 points. Susan Polgar Foundation Girls' Invitational (July 25-30)

The 12th edition of the SPFGI, held at Webster University in St. Louis, Missouri, for the first time formally allowed for entrants from other countries, in addition to those from the United States as previously. Three Canadian representatives participated: Andrea Botez (currently residing in Oregon), Rachel Tao of Windsor, Ontario, and from this province, Ashley Tapp. They finished with 3.5, 3.5, and 4.0 points respectively in the six-round competition, although Tapp lost on time in a winning position in the last round. The overall winner was twelve-year-old Thalia Cervantes with 5.5 points; in addition to the FIDE-rated tournament there was training along with blitz, bughouse, and tactics competitions. Report

North American U20 (July 26-30)

Last year forty-nine juniors travelled to Kitchener for the inaugural North American U20 Championship. This year Kitchener again hosted the event, this time with sixty-four players in Open and Girls Sections. Unfortunately again this year there were only participants from two federations (Canada and U.S.), no players from Mexico or Bermuda made the trip. At stake in both sections were (W)GM norms and (W)IM titles to those finishing first, and (W)IM norms and (W)FM titles for second and third places. As a result competition was intense, and a number of the top seeds found the going too tough. In the end all the prizes went to our American visitors with one exception. First in the Open was IM Kasev Vaswanadha, followed by Varun Krishnan and Canadian Guannan Terry Song, while WFMs Agata Bykovtsev, Jennifer Yu, and Kimberly Ding were the top three in the Girls' Section. The same two B.C. players who participated last year also took part again this year: Tanraj Sohal scored 6.0/9, Jason Cao a half point less. The joint Quebec Open/Championnats individuels d'échecs de la Francophonie was won by French GM Romain Edouard with 8.0/9, GM Samy Shoker (Egypt) was second and GM Francois Fargere (France) tied for third with top Canadian Steve Bolduc, the latter the recipient of a full point when GM Bator Sambuev misunderstood the time of the last round. The large trailing group on 6.5 included Maxim Dlugy, Slim Bouaziz, Eric Hansen, Aman Hambleton, Alexandre Le Siège (returning to tournament chess after a long break), and Olivier Kenta Chiku-Ratte, the latter gaining the FM title as a consequence. Of the five B.C. players in the field the best results were put up by Kevin and Ethan Low, who gained 120 and 200 rating points respectively for their scores of 5.0 and 4.5 points. Standings

Canadian Closed (July 10-16)

Not mentioned in our report on the Canadian Closed Championship was the fact there was a $1,000 brilliancy prize on offer, generously donated by IM Brian Hartman's company Business Improvement Group Inc. Three games were to be submitted for consideration, with the judging done by B.C. icon Duncan Suttles. Suttles came to a decision, and the brilliancy prize goes to GM Bator Sambuev for his impressive round four victory over IM Raja Panjwani:

Vancouver West Open (August 1-2) by Joe "Throwback" Roback

This August's CFC-rated Vancouver West Open #6 marked the return of the elusive Madiyar Amerkeshev (2209 FIDE) who won the guaranteed $600 first prize. This was Madiyar's second appearance in a BC tournament, the first being the July Active last weekend which he also placed clear first. In the first round alone, practically every national master in the tournament had either a disadvantageous or outright losing position against their lower rated opponents. Study your endgames, kids!

Even scathed with a first round half point bye from the ferry trip to the mainland, Madiyar (pictured in the striped white shirt by the trophies) was calmly accumulating points against Vancouver's finest (I'm not talking about the police). NM Alfred Pechisker (2266 CFC) and NM Tanraj Sohal (2358 CFC) are two of the hardest guys to beat in the province with their deep positional understanding and endgame proficiency (also based on their ratings and my personal experience).

I didn't see Tanraj's game but Madiyar played a flexible ...e6 and ...b6 setup against Alfred which transposed into a KID of sorts.

Also, congratulations to NM Mayo Fuentebella who placed clear second for $200 (a clever Mayo tactic is posted). James Li is making a part time job out of chess tournaments with his most recent $100 U1800 prize. The second U1800 section was split between Nathaniel Knox, Daniel Chen, Kai Wang, and Andrew Hemstapat.

Also congratulations to our exuberant neighbouring winners next door in the Junior Section: Daniel Wang first place trophy, and other Open Section trophy winners: Jemelyn Reyes, Jason Qian, Marc Yuan, Borna Amjadi.

Our two-day event trophy winners included Jeremy Reyes, Ryan Yang, Jocelyn Reyes, Jacob McBride, Brian Shao, Gloria Yu, Kiran Sun, Matthew He, BiaoBiaoBoyong Guo. Also congrats to our medalists Matthew Ji, and Stephanie Gu who won a medal in her first tournament.

Shoutouts to visiting player Jerry Kobalenko who commuted from Canmore, AB. Jerry seemed to be channeling BC's Duncan Suttles' unique style in a hypo-rat chimera where he nearly beat a NM.

We wish a fond farewell to Peter Kalisvaart who proved his chops game after game. One such notable game was this year's Grand Pacific Open where Peter drew and nearly beat BC's highest rated player.

Special thanks to Beau Pulfer, Alfred, Maxim, and of course Vivien for whom this event would not have taken place. See you at the next one!

Roback, Joe - Fuentebella, Mayo [C02] Vancouver West op #6 (2), 01.08.2015

1.e4 e6 2.d4 d5 3.e5 I have tried several moves here against Mayo: 3.Nd2, Nc3, and even 3.exd5. The French Advance, while it may not be the most challenging variation, suits my style. 3...c5 4.c3 Nc6 5.Nf3 Nge7!? This allows white to advance the pawn to b5 and leave enough time to guard the d pawn at the same time. 6.a3 Nf5 7.b4 b6 Mayo might have been guarding his c-pawn but this doesn't help his structure or development. 8.Be2 I'd like to play 8.Bd3 immediately but my queen needs to guard the d pawn. 8...a5 Mayo entombs his light square bishop and knight with his own pawns. 9.b5 Nb8 10.a4 Nd7 11.0-0 Bb7 12.Re1 I anticipate that Black's counter-play might involve an ...f6 break to attack my central pawn chain. This rook move is supporting the e-file and possibly putting pressure on e6 if the position opens up. 12...cxd4 13.cxd4 Bb4 14.Bd2 Offering a trade of Black's good bishop for White's bad one. I wasn't really sure what to do with this bishop anyway. Typically White's dark bishop develops to b2 to guard the d-pawn. 14...Qe7 15.Bd3 0-0 16.Nc3 Rfc8 17.Ne2 Migrating my minor pieces to the king-side where I anticipate most of my play will be generated. 17...Nf8 Black is offering me to trade bishop to capture with an a-pawn. This would give black a passed pawn and a target on the a-file for his rooks. 18.Rb1 Bxd2 19.Qxd2 Nh4 20.Nxh4 Qxh4 I assume that Mayo is trying to provoke pawn weaknesses by luring his queen into my camp. 21.Rb3 Hopefully a multi-purpose move. The rook may swing to the king-side, it guards the c3 square from invading rooks, and it potentially keeps the queen out of a3. 21...Rc7 22.f4 Gaining space and threatening an f5 pawn break. 22...g6 23.Rf1 Rac8 24.Qe1 Qe7 25.g4 f5 26.g5 Rc4!? Offering an exchange sacrifice. Mayo's minor pieces are restricted and he's trying to generate play. My engine says that it's winning if I take right away but I wanted to prepare the capture first. 27.Qa1 h6 28.Qa3 Qd8 29.h4 R8c7 30.Qd6 Rd7 31.Qa3 hxg5 32.hxg5 Rh7 33.Bxc4 dxc4 34.Rh3 Qd5 35.Qg3 Guarding ...Qg2# 35...Rc7 36.Rh2 c3 37.Rc1 Qb3 38.Rxc3 Qd1+ 39.Kf2 Rd7 40.Rb3 This protects the base of my a3 pawn chain. from the queen. 40...Bd5 41.Ra3 Qd2 42.Qc3 Trying to trade down queens to convert safely. 42...Qd1 43.Ra1 Qb3 44.Qxb3 Bxb3 45.Ra3 Bc4 46.Ke3 Kf7 47.Rh1 Rc7 48.Rd1 Ke8 Before white's next move, Fritz 11 evaluates this position as + 4.33 for white likely due to the extra d-pawn, the restricted dark knight, and the rook, pair. 49.Rc3??

A deadly oversight in time trouble. Mayo is quite resourceful tactically and an endgame marksman. 49...Bxe2! 50.Rxc7 Bxd1 51.Rc6 0-1

4.e4 [0:02:56]

A finesse of some sort. But since I always answer 4.d4 with 4...Bg4, and have played many games with 4.d4 Bg4 5.e4 Nc6, it wasn't hard to decide what to play here. No King's Indian Defence today!

The game has developed as expected. I like Black's position, especially in a 3-minute game, because Black has no bad pieces and has clear plans, while White's compensating bishop pair is a long way from doing anything. 15.g4 [0:02:19] 15...Kh8 [0:02:31] 16.Rf2 [0:02:11] 16...Qd7 [0:02:26] 17.Rc1 [0:02:02] 17...b5?! [0:02:19] Breaking prematurely. It would have been better to have sat on the position with 17...Nec6. 18.axb5 [0:01:59] 18...axb5 [0:02:18] 19.cxb5 [0:01:58] 19...Nxb5 [0:02:16] 20.Nxb5 [0:01:51] 20...Qxb5 [0:02:13]

21.d4?! [0:01:50] 21...cxd4?! [0:02:03] It seems that White's last move can be refuted with 21...fxe4! 22.dxc5 Nd5, although that didn't occur to me at the time. 22.Bxd4 [0:01:49] 22...e5 [0:02:02] This was my bright idea, but it isn't that good. 23.fxe5 [0:01:47] 23...dxe5 [0:02:01] 24.Bc3? [0:01:45] After 24.Bc5!, White is on top. Black's problems on the light squares are worse than White's problems on the dark squares. 24...f4 [0:01:57]

This, on the other hand, is the position Black had in mind. White's c3-bishop is ineffective and Black plans to mate. 25.Bf1 [0:01:42] According to the engine, 25.g5!? isn't the best move, but I think it's definitely the most annoying. 25...Qb6 [0:01:55] 26.Kg2? [0:01:40] 26...g5! [0:01:49] Speaking only for myself, I like this move. Black's e7-knight is about to enter the game. 27.Be2?! [0:01:37] 27...Ng6 [0:01:47] 28.Bf3 [0:01:36] 28...Nh4+ [0:01:45] 29.Kf1 [0:01:35] 29...Rfd8 [0:01:39] I'm not quite sure why I moved this rook. 30.Qa4? [0:01:32]

White seems unaware that his King is about to get attacked. White's queen should stay near his king with 30.Qe2. 30...Rd3 [0:01:21] My first thought was to play 30...Qe3!, but I missed 30.Re1 Qd3+! 31.Be2 Qxh3+. The rook invasion is strong as well, though. 31.Bg2? [0:01:15] 31.Ba5 was better. White took 17 seconds for 31.Bg2, confirming that Black's attack took him by surprise. Maybe that's why I moved the f8-rook off the f-file... 31...Rbd8? [0:00:51] This is really bad - I took 30 seconds and didn't play the obvious 31...Nxg2 32.Kxg2 Qe3, which levels White's position. 32.Kg1? [0:01:11]

Fortunately for Black, 32.Ba5 can be met with 32...Qa7, pinning White's a5-bishop to his a4-queen. 32.Qa5 might have been the best chance. Neither player is covering him (her?) self with glory in terms of accuracy. 32...Rg3! [0:00:35] A good move! 33.Kf1 [0:00:58] 33...f3 [0:00:30] 33...Nxg2 34.Rxg2 Rf3+ mates, but the move played proves that White has a bad bishop. So you tell me - which move is REALLY better for Black? 34.Bh1 [0:00:56] 34...Rxh3 [0:00:28]

White resigns See? White has a bad bishop on h1. Even when I have a mating attack I end up playing positionally. Sigh. 0-1
