HERE AND THERE

Portland Winter Open (December 12-13)

Vancouver junior Jingzhou (Peter) Lai made the long journey to Portland, Oregon to play in that city's Winter Open tournament. He tied for second in the small Open Section (eight players) with 3.0/5, a point behind winner Nick Raptis. Jingzhou drew two games against opponents rated over 2000, given below.

FIRST SATURDAY DECEMBER by Michael Yip

"After a month's break and reflection, I concluded that to make further progress, a widening of my repertoire and corresponding middlegame knowledge was required. As my opponents are more or less the same from tournament to tournament, they have ample time to prepare and are used to my current preferences. Since last month I found myself an apartment and have a much better facility for studying.

I finished with 6/11 (+2 -1 =8) with the loss coming against the 9-year old unrated Vietnamese Asian boys champion. His brother also played in the the FM-A group and crushed his opposition. After the first two games which I won, the story of my tournament was the number of missed opportunities I had, especially in the last three games. But to be fair I did save one completely lost position in round 3.

My new openings seemed to confuse my opponents early and throw off their preparations. However, as I was on unfamiliar ground, I did not know the typical middlegame ideas/plans well enough to navigate my way through the complicated positions that arose.

After the tournament ended I had lunch with Thomas Heyl (Germany). He made this interesting comment: "...you're easy to prepare for. You like everything neat and tidy. Every piece and pawn in its right place. You won't make a weakening move even if it is good for you..." (paraphrasing).

My score should be result in a 20 point rating gain but analysis of the games show severe defects in my play. I started working with the interesting book Revolutionize Your Chess by Moskalenko and trying to understand positions using his five touchstones. The book also shows a test that Moskalenko gives to his students. This seems like a useful exercise to gauge performance when used regularly."

Merry Xmas

1.e4 d6 2.d4 Nf6 3.Nc3 e5 4.Nf3 Nbd7 5.dxe5 Capturing on e5 so early gives Black additional options for developing Bf8 and should ensure Black of an easy game. 5...dxe5 6.Bc4 Be7 Black makes no attempt to refute White's move order and makes the prepared Philidor pattern. This approach saves time but limits the exploitation of favourable opportunities if they should arise. 6...Bb4!? is the most obvious way to exploit white's move order. 7.0-0 (7.Qe2 Bxc3+ 8.bxc3 Qe7 9.a4 0-0 10.Ba3 c5 11.a5 b6 12.Bc1 Bb7= 13.Bg5 h6 14.Bh4 Rfd8 15.Nd2 Nf8 16.f3 Ng6 17.Bf2 Nf4 18.Qf1=+ Bc6 19.g3 Ne6 20.Be3 Ne8 21.Qf2 Nd6 22.Be2 Nb5 23.Nb1 Ng5 24.Ra2 Nd6 25.h4 Ngxe4 26.fxe4 Nxe4 27.Qg1 Qe6 28.Rb2 Nxc3 29.Qxc3 Bxh1 30.Nd2 bxa5 31.Rb5 Rac8 32.Rxa5 Rc7 33.Nf3 Bxf3 34.Bxf3 Qb6 35.Ra4 Qb1+ 36.Kf2 Qxc2+ 0-1 Jensen,B - Varga,Z /Obro 2006/EXT 2007) 7...c6 8.Qe2 0-0 9.Bd2 Qc7 10.a3 Be7 Black keeps all his pieces and awaits developments

From this a proper plan can be made. 13.a5 (1.14) Black will play ...a5 securing the queenside if this is not played. 13.b4!? Bxc4 14.Qxc4 Ne6 15.Rfd1 a5! 16.b5 Rad8= White's queen is strongly placed and for now ...f6 is hindered. 13...b5 (1.10) With counterplay. This correctly takes the play into dynamic channels. Now Black needs to follow up correctly to maintain the pressure. 14.axb6 axb6 15.b4? This over-reaches on the queenside. 15...Bxc4 (1.10) 16.Qxc4 b5! A strong intermediate move that allows Black to take over. 17.Qe2 Ne6!?!/+ (1.06)

17...Na6! I did not want to take any chance on piece misplacement and possible complications and so avoided this strong continuation without a deep examination of its impact. 18.Nd1 Nxb4 19.Ne3 Na6 20.Nf5 Bf6 21.Qe3 Nac5 22.h3 Ne6-/+ Black has won a pawn and the wayward Na6 has returned to meaningful duty. The sole compensation White has is the active Nf5 but there are no threats to Black who can look forward to a trouble free conversion of the extra pawn. 18.Rab1 Ra3?! (1.04) This is a serious tempo loss. This rook 'activation' is the first step in the wrong direction and is the direct product of the failure to make a concrete assessment of the position. Black does not notice that White wants to move the knight to play c4. 18...Rfd8 19.Rfd1 f6=/+ 19.Nd1 f6? Too routine. Black is stuck in static thinking mode and plays to entomb the B/g3. Now White can rid himself of a big headache - the hole on c4 and associated invasion problems. Better is 19...Nf4 20.Bxf4 exf4 21.e5 Nb6=/+ 20.c4 Qb7= (0.59) 21.Ne3 Rfa8!? 21...Nb6?! allows White to take over. 22.c5! (22.cxb5?! cxb5 23.Qxb5 Nc7) I missed this hit allowing Black to win the e-pawn. 24.Qe2 Qxe4=/+ 22...Na4 23.Qc2 Rc3 24.Qa2 Qc8 25.Nf5 Re8 26.Rbc1 Rxc1 27.Rxc1+/= 22.Rfd1!= Nf4? (0.48) Only here does Black suffer from calculation errors. Here Black makes an incomplete list of candidate moves, missing 22...Ra2 and 22...Ndf8 and hanging his position by missing 26.Qg4. 22...Nb6 lets White take the initiative. 23.cxb5 (23.c5?! Na4 24.Nxe5!? fxe5

25.Qg4 Qc8 26.Nf5 Bf8=) 23...cxb5 24.Qxb5 Nc7 25.Qe2 Qxe4 26.Nd2 Qd3 27.Qg4; 22...Ndf8 23.Nf5 Ng6= ; 22...Ra2! is the best defence. 23.Qf1 Ndf8 24.cxb5 Qxb5 25.Qxb5 cxb5 26.Nd5 Kf7 Black has good endgame prospects. 23.Bxf4 exf4 24.Nf5 Ne5? (0.46) Handing the game over to White. Black makes another blunder due to poor calculation skills. Black goes fearlessly forwards to fight for the initiative but this move turns out to be a superficial gesture that is easily refuted. 24...Bf8+/- was the last chance to bail out of a worsening position but I did not want to make a passive move. 25.Nxe5 25.Nxe7+ Qxe7 26.Nxe5 Qxe5 27.cxb5 cxb5 28.f3 was what I saw. 25...fxe5 (0.46) 26.Qg4!+- I completely missed this. 26...Bf6 (0.36)

The astute reader will recall that we discussed a 1974 Canadian Junior back in Bulletin #170, won by Nigel Fullbrook. So why the second report? Well, because there were actually two Canadian junior championships in 1974. FIDE instituted the first World Junior in 1951 and decided to hold the event biennially, every odd-numbered year. Consequently when the Canadian Junior began in 1970 it was also held biennially but in the even-numbered years, the winner qualifying for the following world tournament. This worked fine until 1973 when FIDE switched to an annual World Junior - thus the need to hold an 'extra' Canadian Junior (the 3rd) in May of 1974 to determine the Canadian representative to that summer's world event. The 4th Canadian Junior was held at its traditional time, between Christmas and New Year's, at International House on the campus of the University of British Columbia.

Organized and directed by Jonathan Berry, the tournament was closer than the final crosstable indicates. Grant Spraggett kept pace with pre-tournament favourite Peter Nurmi until a couple of losses in the middle rounds knocked him out of contention. Nurmi himself, while deserving his margin of victory, was a little lucky in two adjourned games in rounds two and three, in particular winning a drawn position on time against Ray Ebisuzaki. Played in the 'good old days' before increments and sudden-death time controls, the tournament produced at least one good story as a result:

"A most interesting incident took place in connection with the game MacKean - Nickoloff. Before the time scramble Nickoloff had a slight advantage, but by adjournment time the balance had swung over to the other side. The players agreed to a draw, but it was not because MacKean was unaware of his advantage. Not at all. While MacKean walked home after the adjournment, he said to himself "bxc5, bxc5, that's a good move!" When he got to his room he realized that the good move was cxb5 - bxc5 was impossible! In that moment of agonized doubt, MacKean knew not whether he had sealed cxb5, which would give him a slight advantage, or bxc5, which would give him a loss by forfeiture when the sealed move envelope was opened the next day. Faced with those possibilities, the only solution was to phone up Nickoloff, agree to a draw, and get a good night's sleep." [Jonathan Berry in the tournament book]
