Montreal Summer Classic (July 30 – August 3)

Brandon Zhu

William Bremner

Organized by Lefong Hua, the Montreal Summer Chess Classic consists of an open tournament in three sections alongside an invitational IM norm round robin. The 'boys from BC' (see below), Brandon Zhu and William Bremner, are playing in the Open Section; with one round remaining Brandon has withdrawn for a final score of 2.0/5, while William has 2.5 points and is tied for second, a half-point behind the leaders. In the IM norm event half the field is tied for first with 4.0 points after seven rounds – should be an exciting finish. Standings

Cowichan Rapid Open (July 28) by Nigel Hanrahan

The Wood Sense Chess Club in Duncan hosted the first Cowichan Rapid Open on Saturday, July 28. The tournament took place at the Island Savings Centre in Duncan – home of the Cowichan Capitals and the World's Largest Hockey Stick. Thirty players participated, coming from North Saanich near Victoria to Nanoose Bay just south of Parksville on the Island. We even had an Aussie - Tony Weller from Queensland down under - on holiday taking part.

FM Jason Cao went undefeated, as did NM Roger Patterson, over the five-round event. Jason won on tiebreak. NM Mike Stanford came third, winning another tiebreak with three other players: Ross Richardson, Tony Weller, and Kent Cronin. Top junior went to William Li and second went to Declan O'Sullivan.

I wish to thank the Wood Sense Chess Club in Duncan, the staff at the Island Savings Centre, Victoria Chess - for their extreme kindness in loaning the equipment - and the Victoria chess fraternity generally. I hope we can do it again, only bigger and better. A crosstable and set of photos can be found on the Victoria Chess Club website.

Pan-American YCC (July 21-29)

Held this year in Santiago, Chile, the Pan-American Youth Chess Championship has the same two-year age categories and gender divisions as the CYCC or WYCC but only players from the Americas may enter. The Canadian delegation of fourteen included three players from this province, Aiden Zhou (U12), Kate Jiang (U12G), and James Li (U18). It is winter in South America at this time of year, and conditions inside the playing hall (the gymnasium of the national sports stadium) matched the name of the host country; to what degree this had an impact on the games is uncertain, but there are many pictures of players bundled up in coats.

The big Canadian success story was Max Chen in the U12 Open Section (the Spanish designations “Absoluto” and “Femenino” sound even more sexist than the usual “Open” and “Girls”), who tied for second with 7.0/9 points and won the silver medal after tiebreaks were applied (he won more games than his American counterpart). Other Canadians with top-ten finishes were Daniel Pugach (U8), Alina Yuexi Chen (U8G), and Adam Gaisinsky (U16). Kate was on plus two going into the last round but lost to finish with 5.0 points; James scored a disappointing 3.5/9; and Aiden was ranked third in the U12 Open Section but gave up too many draws to lower-rated players, finishing in fifteenth place. One highlight before the sixth round was a meet and greet with the Canadian ambassador to Chile, Her Excellency Patricia Peña. Quebec Open (July 21-28)

Following the CYCC and Canadian Open (see last issue), the dynamic duo of Brandon Zhu and William Bremner continued their summer chess tour of Central Canada by entering the Quebec Open. Held in Longueuil (situated on the south shore of the St Lawrence River opposite Montreal), the tournament attracted one hundred and seventy five players in five sections, with Brandon and William being the only BC entrants – both played in the Open Section. Razvan Preotu was ranked fifth going into the competition but held off the other five grandmasters to claim the first prize with 7.5/9, just ahead of Romain Édouard (France), second, and Bator Sambuev (Montreal) and Victor Mikhalevski (Israel) who tied for third. Brandon played a host of titled players and scored 50%; William finished with 5.5/9. Notably both drew with Canadian Open co-winner IM Raymond Kaufman, no stranger to these parts. Brandon's FIDE rating improved by 50 points, William's by 150; in fact, William gained a whopping 307 points from the CYCC, Canadian Open, and Quebec Open. Standings

A technical point of which your editor was unaware; we have become accustomed to large FIDE rating changes for players under the age of eighteen because of their K factor equalling 40, but just over a year ago the rating regulations were changed to include the following: "If the number of games (n) for a player on any list for a rating period multiplied by K (as defined above) exceeds 700, then K shall be the largest whole number such that K x n does not exceed 700." Thus, Brandon played 21 FIDE-rated games for the August list, 700 / 21 equals 33.33, so [Brandon's K

factor for that list is 33. For William the figures are 700 / 18 which equals 38.88, so his K factor for the August list is 38. This blunts some of the previous excesses which occurred when an individual played many games within a one month rating period.]

Susan Polgar Foundation Girls' Invitational (July 21-26)

Held in St. Louis, this year's fifteenth edition of the SPFGI, the most prestigious all-girls tournament in the U.S., continued the practice begun several years ago of accepting participants from individual Canadian provinces as well as from U.S. states and other countries comprising the American continent. BC's representative this year was Lyvia Shan, who won the right in a qualification tournament held under the auspices of the Golden Knights Junior CC in March; the two finishers ahead of her declined to attend.

In addition to a FIDE-rated six-round tournament there were also training sessions, along with tactics, blitz, and bughouse competitions. Facing strong opposition, Lyvia was unable to win a game in the tournament, but the experience will stand her in good stead for the future. The overall winner was Sasha Konovalenko, who finished ahead on tiebreak of Thanh Thuy Nguyen,

Antonella Romero, Shreya B. Mangalam, and Ontario's Svitlana Demchenko – all scored 5.0 points. Other familiar faces were Andrea Botez and Washington's Naomi Bashkansky (4.0 points each). Final standings and photos

Vancouver July Active (July 21)

The second of the new monthly actives organized by Luc Poitras at the Vancouver Bridge Centre, the July Active attracted twenty-six players, including six juniors participating in an adjunct round robin. The Open Section was headed by Mayo Fuentebella and Andrew Hemstapat, and these two tied for first with 4.5/5 after drawing with each other in round four. Luc Poitras was alone in third, while Edward Tang, Ryan Leong, Sherry Tian, Jofrel Landingin, Brian Yang, Kevin Li, and Callum Lehingrat all won a minimum prize of $25 for scoring 3.0 points. Richard Ingram won the upset prize, also $25. In the Junior Section Alexander Jin took first prize with a perfect 5.0/5, while Borna Amjadi and Leonardo Zhou were also in the money with 3.0 points each. Crosstable

BC Round Robin (July 13-15)

A six-player invitational round robin was held recently at the Irving K. Barber Centre at UBC. With an average rating of 2270 hard-fought draws were the order of the day, but it was Davaa-Ochir Nyamdorj who emerged from the pack to take first place with an undefeated 4.0/5. In the last eighteen months Davaa has gradually been ascending the BC ratings list, and this 2510 performance has catapulted him over 2300; he also now qualifies for the National Master title. Alone in second a point back was the veteran Leon Piasetski on plus one, while Keith MacKinnon and Max Gedajlovic tied for third with 2.5 points each. CFC crosstable

Chess books for sale

We have received a request from the father of a former junior player – the latter was regularly involved in tournaments when he was in high school, but is no longer playing since he attended university. Which leaves a number of barely-used chess books in near-mint condition for sale: a list can be found here. ## BRUCE HARPER ANNOTATES

Opponent – Harper, Bruce [A40] ICC 3 0 Internet Chess Club

Not every game in this column can be a positional masterpiece, rich in creative ideas and ideal for improving the reader's play. In fact, now that I think about it, these are pretty rare. In any case, today we have lighter fare. Everything works for Black, so this game might be a manual on how not to play against the Rat. 1.d4 [3:00] 1...g6 [3:00] 2.Nc3 [2:59] 2...Bg7 [3:00] 3.Nf3 [2:58] 3...d6 [2:59] 4.Bg5 [2:57]

It's hard to know what to say about this move. It must do something, but it's hard to know just what. 4...a6 [2:58] 5.Qd2 [2:56] 5...b5 [2:57] 6.a3?! [2:55] While 6.a3 prevents ...b5-b4 (for the moment), it allows Black to catch up in development, thereby avoiding possible adverse consequences from making four of his first five moves with pawns. 6...Bb7 [2:56] 7.0-0-0?! [2:52] Another dubious move. An age-old adage tells us that "you shouldn't move the pawns in front of your king". There are so many situations where this isn't so that many players have dismissed the adage (if they are even aware of it) as a relic of a bygone age. The truth is that this principle is still valid in many types of positions, and this is one of them. Black now has a way of opening lines against White's king, which has rashly committed itself to the queenside. 7...Nd7 [2:54]

8.e4?! [2:50] According to the engine, the last chance for White to avoid a disadvantage was to play 8.d5, which leads to a very comfortable Sicilian formation for Black after 8...c5 9.dxc6 Bxc6 10.e4. 8...c5 [2:52] 9.d5 [2:47] 9...Nb6 [2:44] The immediate 9...b4 was also possible, but Black sets his sights higher. And, given the way White has played the opening so far, it isn't unreasonable for Black to hope for more imprecise moves from his opponent. 10.h4? [2:44] With the pressure on his centre mounting, White cannot afford to waste another tempo. 10...h6 [2:42] 11.Bf4 [2:40] 11...Nf6 [2:40]

11...b4!?, starting an immediate attack against White's king, had a lot to be said for it. But Black reasons that such an attack will be that much stronger if his g8-knight can join in, and there is always a chance that White might overlook the threat to his e4-pawn. 12.Be2? [2:16] This leads to an immediate collapse. The curious thing is that, up to this point, White has played (too) quickly, using 20 seconds for his first 11 moves. White then used 24 seconds for 12.Be2?, which doesn't even offer any resistance. This makes no sense at all to me, but maybe it's just a sign of the times, since a lot of other things don't make sense these days. 12...b4 [2:36] 13.Nb1 [2:13] 13...Nxe4 [2:32] 14.Qe3 [2:09] 14...Nf6! [2:30]

The machine recommends 14...f5, supporting the strongly-placed e4-knight. But I think that 14...Nf6 (which isn't a bad move) has some psychological points in its favour - White's d5-pawn falls and his f4-bishop is now also a potential target. 15.axb4? [2:04] 15...Nbx d5 [2:28] 16.Qd2 [1:54] White had to get rid of one of Black's knights with 16.Rxd5, but that's hopeless. 16...Ne4 [2:21]

17.Qe3 [1:48] The only good things you can say about this move are that it saves White's dark-squared bishop and that it ends the game. 17...Nxe3 [2:19] 18.Bxe3 [1:47] White resigns 0-1

CHES PERSONALITY LORNE HUNT contributed by Paul Leblanc

One of the more interesting members of the Victoria Chess Club is Lorne (Darrel) Hunt. Lorne was one of a promising group of Vancouver Island juniors in the early 1970s including Jonathan Berry, Dan Scoones, Brian McLaren, Harold Brown, Harry Moore, Jeff Reeve and Glenn Morin, all of whom became masters. Duncan Haines was also part of this elite group but he gave up chess from 1979 to 2012 to build a successful business. Lorne, too was well on the way to earning the master title when derailed by some health concerns in the mid-1970's.

Lorne is the second longest-standing member of the chess club (after Alois Holzknrecht) and is, in fact, a past-president. The Victoria Daily Colonist chess column on 24 October, 1971 featured Lorne: "On the Island chess scene, Darrel Hunt has become what could be the youngest chess club president in Canada, when he was elected to that position at the Victoria City Chess Club. Darrel is only eighteen.”

In the summer of 1972, Lorne and Brian McLaren travelled across the U.S. randomly playing in chess tournaments and using prize money to pay for gas. Starting in Spokane, the two made it to New York during the height of Bobby Fischer mania, visited the Marshall Chess Club, when Edmar Mednis was introduced as the commentator for the upcoming Fischer-Spassky match. They played in a Bill Goichberg tournament at the McAlpine Hotel that Lorne still remembers vividly. Brian recalls that many of the old masters were in attendance including Edward Lasker. Another New York stop was the 42nd Street Chess Club, known to the locals as the Flea House.

The return trip included chess events in Chicago, and several stops in California. Bob Zuk joined the duo from Chicago to California. Brian remembers “we were using the US chess magazine to look up tournaments and then just driving there – there wasn’t a plan.” Lorne was interviewed by telephone for the Victoria Daily Colonist during the trip. Columnist Ray Kerr was intrigued by the extended chess tour. The article ended with a quote from Lorne: “That’s chess baby” and an addendum from Kerr: “You bet it is.”

Shortly after returning to Victoria, Lorne again made the news with a simultaneous exhibit at a local high school.

Lorne made a brief comeback to competitive chess from 2004 to 2007 then returned to the friendly atmosphere of the Victoria Chess Club where he continues to play occasionally.

Lorne was a professional chef and worked at the Empress Hotel in Victoria, the Princess Mary floating restaurant and the Hotel Vancouver. He spoke recently of cooking for the Queen during a royal visit to Victoria and of a gold medal he received in appreciation.
